Coloring Page

Prothonotary Warblers are bright yellow with gray-blue wing feathers. They are found in southeast North America. Their population has declined with the clearing of swamp forests but has recently been helped by conservation efforts. Prothonotary Warblers make their homes in wooded swamps. These warblers stay low and find insects to eat along the shoreline. Prothonotary Warblers are one of the few warblers that nest in dead trees. They migrate early in both spring and fall.
